BRADDOCK, Pa., April 2.-To-night when the Pennsylvania Railroad station was almost deserted and Byron Thomas, the night agent, was the only man on duty, two men wearing uniforms similar to those worn by regular railroaders, entered the ticket office and while one of them stood over Thomas with a revolver the other looted the office, securing about $200 in cash. A tin box containing $1,200 in bills was cast aside by the robbers because the jingle of coin could not be heard when they shook it. The men escaped up the railroad track and at about midnight the officers in pursuit disturbed them while they were ransacking the station at Bessemer, but both got

NATIONAL LEAGUE CAMP.

Mr. Spalding Resigned His Claim to the Presidency in a Letter to the Magnates.

PITTSBURG MAN WILL BE TENDERED

THE VACANT POSITION.

TEMPLE

PRESIDENT

Text of the Spalding Letter as Presented to the Peace Conference by James Hart, of Chicago.

NEW YORK, April 2.-The National League baseball war is practically ended. A. G. Spalding has resigned his claim as chief executive of the big organization, further contest in the courts. Mr. Spalding's letter of resignation was presented to the magnates at the second day's session of the peace conference at the Fifth-avenue Hotel. The letter, which was presented by James Hart, president of the Chicago club, was addressed to the | ginia, 2. "National League and Association of Professional Baseball Clubs," and read: "Gentlemen-In accepting the presidency of the National League, to which office I was informed last December I had been duly elected. I promulgated the following platform as to the policy of my administration: 'To promote, foster, elevate and perpetuate the game of baseball, the national sport of America; to eliminate all grade and demoralize the sport; to inculcate in the governors of the game, club sportsmanship is, and to subordinate the financial side of the game; to cultivate among the players a desire for the higher athletic development, that they may, by their skillfuiness, integrity and gentlemanly deportment, both on and off the field, and add luster and interest to the national game; to establish a central governing body in which all professional baseball interests shall be properly represented, this body to be clothed with ample power to carry into effect these and other objects that tend to maintain the integrity and high standard of the game.' "Conditions have arisen which, in my opinion, make it impossible at this time to carry out all the principles embodied in the above platform, and as no compromise or modification of these principles will be satisfactory to me, I have decided to discontinue further efforts in this direction and hereby tender my resignation as president of the National League and respectfully insist that it be accepted without

"I wish emphatically to declare that I am prompted in this action solely by the belief that prolonging a factional political warfare into the playing season would be distasteful to the public, injurious to the National League in particular, and to professional baseball in general. "A. G. SPALDING." Thus ends one of the bitterest internal struggles that has ever shaken the National League, a struggle that threatened to wreck the premier baseball organization. While Mr. Temple has not been formally elected to the chief executive office of the League, it was decided unanimously to offer him the place. YOUNG A POSSIBILITY. Mr. Temple was at one time owner of the Pittsburg club and is a man of large means; it was he who donated the Temple cups to be played for by the clubs finishing first and second at the end of the League season. He is known as a lover of the sport, but it was felt here to-night that he might possibly decline the honor tendered him because the League has decided to establish its permanent headquarters in New here. It has also been decided to make the offices of president and secretary-treasurer separate. The latter office will, according to the best information, be tendered to N. E. Young. Mr. Young said tonight he would accept the office, though it necessitated his coming to New York and establishing his office here. At to-day's session all were present except A. Bell, of Brooklyn. The magnates discussed the matter of constitutional amendments with a view of establishing | Hoos winning four. The scores follow: some kind of executive head for the League. Mr. Hart told of going to California, when he talked League matters over with Spalding. The latter said he saw he could not accomplish some things he proletter to the meeting. It is dated March 8. There was some discussion as to what should be done with it. Freedman and his followers contended that Spalding had never been elected president of the League. and, therefore, could not resign. The matter was solved by a motion to simply declare the "incident closed."

Next came the work of selecting a president for the League. The name of Edward B. Talcott, former owner of the New York League, was first proposed, but it was found he could not accept the office, as he would not be able to come to New York to live. Messrs, Freedman and Brush then made a proposition to do away with the office of president and for the appointment of a committee of three members in whose hands the governing power of the League should be placed. There was instant opposition to this and a long drawn out discussion. Messrs. Freedman and Brush finally gave way and the matter of the presidency was again taken up.

SODEN DECLINED. Soden, of Boston, was mentioned but declined. Hart proposed Harry Pulliam's name, but Pulliam, in return, proposed William G. Temple, of Pittsburg. Freedman was opposed to the selection of any man until such man had come before the meeting and announced his attitude and the nature of his policy in case of election He said he did not want to vote for any man until he had talked with him and knew what he proposed to do to better the baseball situation. It was pointed out that Temple was a broadminded man and one with a reputation for fairness and loyalty. "There has been a lot of talk," said Freedman, "about taking my club away from me. I want to know what you propose doing about that. Does anybody want to take my club away from me?" One of the Spalding followers disavower any and all intention of a desire to take Freedman's club away from him. The question of Mr. Temple was again taken up and a unanimous vote taken to tender him the presidency. Then an adjournment was had until 8 o'clock in the evening. A telegran was sent to Mr. Temple, who is now in Florida, advising him of the action of the League and asking him if he would accept the presidency.

It was nearly midnight when the League meeting adjourned until to-morrow afternoon. Most of the night session was taken up in discussing the playing rules and schedule. It was decided to play under the same rules as last year. The foul strike rule was incorporated in the book of rules, This rule was in force last season, but was not in the book of rules. It was decided that the pitcher should not have more than BRISBANE, April 2.-Arrived: Miewera, one minute in which to "warm-up" prior to any one inning before delivering the ball, he not being allowed to deliver more than five balls before play.

Soden, Robison and Pulliam were named as a committee to decide on what ball is to e used the coming season. Young, Hart, Ebbetts and Dreyfuss were named as a committee to take the three playing schedales, go over them and draft a schedule smashing the large mirror and other furni-

Temple Is an Ardent "Fan."

PITTSBURG, April 2.-W. G. Temple is well known, not only in Pittsburg, where he is one of the city's principal business sports. His knowledge of baseball is thorough. For several years he was connected with the Pittsburg club as a heavy stockholder and one year as president. On account of his business he was unable to give the game the attention he deemed necessary and in 1893 he turned over the presidency to Al Buckenbarger, the manager of the team at the time. Mr. Temple's foresight in selecting the players for 1893 was rewarded by the team finishing in second place, the first time the Pittsburg team ever had a chance for winning the pennant. In 1894 he sold out his interest in the club but has always kept in close touch with National League affairs. He has always been a stanch supporter of the National

are expected to-day. In spite of the chilly weather the players donned old uniforms and practiced at the ball park yesterday afternoon from 2 until raise their profession to a higher plane 4. They were given only light exercise, as Manager Watkins does not care to take chances on any of them being injured by working in cold weather. They will do light training again this morning and afternoon, and if the weather is warmer on Friday they will get into preliminary practice in earnest for the first exhibition game of the season with Cincinnati on Saturday.

"They are a fine-looking lot of ballplayers," was the complimentary way in which Manager Watkins sized them up as they jogged around the park yesterday. "I believe I have the best lot of ball tossers together this year that ever represented Indianapolis. It will be a hard matter for me to decide just who to turn adrift when the time comes to reduce the number of men to the regular playing strength for the sea-We have an exceptionally strong infield signed, and the outfield will be a fast one. Our battery strength will be stronger than Indianapolis has had for years. One thing I am proud of, and that is we will have a good crowd of batters.'

With this object in view and in order more particularly to acquaint the States adjacent to Illinois with the full scope of the project, the Governors of the Middle West are to be invited to attend as special guests. Besides disclosing the athletic and military importance of the enterprise, it is intended to accentuate the ethical bearings of the games, and to this end eminent representatives of the pulpit will be invited to be present, among whom are the Rt.
